It's your story. We're listening.

Human trafficking investigations and prosecutions are very unique, and the identification of victims is frequently missed. Human trafficking cases require a specific understanding of a nuanced and often misunderstood crime involving a comparatively new law. Healthcare professionals and other key stakeholders are uniquely positioned to identify, intervene, and provide critical support to victims of human trafficking in a collaborative manner. This Summit will provide healthcare professionals and key stakeholders with the knowledge, tools, and resources to identify trafficking victims, as well as best practices for effectively responding to human trafficking cases.
